

MOONSTONE: The Last Piece

I was nervous, it was the last piece. Could it be right, it had to be....

I found a book not about my family, but about how to bring back my family. As I put the book down, it opened to a random page. It said: “A few families have moonstones like the Murphy’s and Spencer’s. If the moonstone crashes, you must enter the code”.

“No!”, I screamed, as the book shut before I could finish reading and then vanished. “How am I going to find the Code now?” I asked myself.

I began to walk and felt something wet touch my ankle “Oh, there you are, Brownie!” I exclaimed. “Hang on, what’s that shiny, green pendant around your neck?” I carefully picked up Brownie. Curiously, I took the shiny, green pendant off Brownie’s neck, and it said: “Follow the blue glow and enter the code into your family’s calculus!” How mysterious.

I remembered my Great Aunt Flo talking about a family calculus, which I always just thought was a delightful story she liked to tell. Now I could see the calculus is actually part of the moonstone mystery, an important piece of the puzzle. Wow, this was all making sense. I went into the spare room where Great Aunt Flo used to stay and found the family cabinet. I searched everywhere inside it for the calculus, pulling drawers in and out. On top of the cabinet was the music box which my Great Aunt Flo never let anyone touch. I reached for the music box and opened the cover. The music started playing and the ballerina started turning around but something sounded different like the tune was stuck. I lifted the music box up to see if I could fix it when a small drawer that I did not know was there flew open. Inside it revealed our family calculus. I found it!! Now for the moonstone.... where is that blue glow I'm meant to find?

It's almost dark so I walked outside. My heart was thumping. I was both excited and nervous, I could see the blue glow in the distance. I put Brownie in my wagon and rode as fast as I could towards the blue glow. It was magical. I couldn't believe my eyes. As I came closer, I saw that the moonstone was broken in two. I reached into my pocket and grabbed the calculus. I entered "Glow Bunny" while holding the moonstones together in my other hand.

At that moment, the sky lit up in bright colours like pink, purple, yellow and green. Then I saw a whole group of rainbow stars. My mouth was hanging open in awe.

In the distance I could see my Mama and my cousins. It had been 100 days since they went missing, I cried happy tears as me and Brownie ran to hug Mama.

I couldn't believe I solved the last piece of the puzzle!
